Man in Motion still full of hope

During his first tour, Hansen went through 96 pairs of gloves and 126 flat tires But this time, he has more support

SEAN LEDWICH

"In life it's not what happens to you, it's what you do with it, and at the end of the day hope is that driving force that there is a better life and that others have been there before. Those that keep sovereignty over their attitude and see blessings every day, they will thrive and live a full and meaningful life."
MAN IN MOTION RICK HANSEN

Church bells and cheers rang out as the Rick Hansen 25th Anniversary Relay ended a two-day swing through Winnipeg at the Headingley Community Centre Saturday.

"I believe that we will find a cure for spinal-cord injury in the next 25 years," Hansen told 150 onlookers at the centre.

The 12,000-kilometre cross-country relay of 7,000 medal-bearers is retracing the original westward Canadian leg of Hansen's 1985-87 Man In Motion World Tour, which saw Hansen power his wheelchair through 34 countries on four continents to raise $26 million for spinal-cord injury research.

In the 25 years since, the Rick Hansen Foundation has raised $250 million to support treatment and emergency response, as well as new research to protect the spinal cord and help it regenerate again.

In Winnipeg, Hansen visited the Winnipeg Health Sciences Centre Saturday, where he met patients living with spinal-cord injuries. He said he shares a message of hope with those adjusting to life after an injury.

"They face their challenges every day and they still see incredible joy, beauty, love, purpose and meaning in life.

"If they focus on what they can do, not on what they can't, life will be good."

As the "end-of-day celebration" drew to a close in Headingley, Hansen took the medal from the neck of final medal-bearer Glenn Reimer, a Headingley Fire Department member who has raised $80,000 in 11 years for kids with disabilities, and placed it safely into its case.

"Humbled," Reimer said of the experience of meeting Hansen. "He's an amazing man."

Busy weekend for firefighters

House fires do more than $100K in damage No major injuries, but man sent to hospital for smoke inhalation

ELISHA DACEY
@METRONEWS.CA

One man was sent to hospital after several house fires in Winnipeg over the weekend.

The first began around 9 a.m. at a home on Magnus Avenue on Friday. Two people managed to escape the burning home.

Officials said the fire caused about $120,000 damage, and was believed to have started in the kitchen.

The fire did not spread to neighbouring houses.

Saturday morning, a fire in an apartment block on Kennedy Street caused about $10,000 damage.

That fire has since been ruled accidental, said Winnipeg police, and no one was injured.

A fire in Point Douglas started at about 5 a.m. on Saturday and caused $30,000 damage, said fire officials.

A 47-year-old man was taken to hospital and treated for smoke inhalation.

Cause?

The cause of the Point Douglas blaze, which happened on Lisgar Avenue, is under investigation, but it's believed to have started on the back porch and spread to the kitchen.

Second suspect arrested in murder

Police have arrested a second suspect wanted for the killing of a Winnipeg man in December.

Chance Moses Guimond, 19, was arrested by police in Calgary on Thursday.

He faces a charge of second-degree murder in the death of Darren Paul George, 22.

George was gunned down on Dec. 7 in Winnipeg.

Police say arrangements are being made to return Guimond to Winnipeg.

Another suspect, Cody Joseph Kakeeway, 19, was arrested in Swift Current, Sask., on Jan. 14.

He also faces a charge of second-degree murder.

Winnipeg police are looking for the public's help following a home invasion that left an elderly woman in hospital.

Police were called to a break-and-enter in progress at a residence in the 1000 block of Henderson Highway around 6 p.m. on Jan. 21.

The investigation has revealed an unknown male suspect forced entry into the residence and demanded money.

The suspect struck the 88-year-old female victim before searching the home for property.

The suspect made off with an undisclosed amount of cash and the victim was taken to hospital.

No arrests have been and it has yet to be determined if the suspect was armed during the robbery.

The investigation continues by members of the major crimes unit and anyone with information regarding the incident is asked to contact investigators at 986-6219 or Crime Stoppers at 786-TIPS (8477).

Swan to push for harsher penalties

Manitoba's attorney general is pushing for tougher charges for those who commit knife crimes, carjackings and home invasions.

Andrew Swan said he'll be pushing for harsher penalties for these violent offences in particular when the country's justice ministers meet next week. Premeditated crimes involving knives, violence carjackings and home invasions all put lives at risk, he said.

"Manitobans are entitled to be safe in their homes, in their communities, on their streets," he said. "Both home invasions and carjackings, in my view, are serious breaches of peoples' right to be safe."

Natural gas rates to go down

Manitobans are about to pay less for natural gas.

The Public Utilities Board has approved a reduction of more than three cents per cubic metre in primary gas rates.

The new rates are effective Feb. 1.

The regulatory agency says residential bills will drop by 9.2 per cent, which will save the average homeowner about $80 a year.

The board says natural gas prices across North America have been dropping since 2008, due in part to new supplies of shale gas being developed.

▶Shots were fired in the Exchange District early Sunday morning, but it's believed no one was hurt.

The Winnipeg Police Service's major crimes unit is investigating after the sounds of gunshots were reported in the Exchange District early Sunday morning.

Police responded to the call near the corner of Bannatyne Avenue and Princess Street at approximately 2:15 a.m. on Sunday, where they located evidence confirming shots were fired.

"There is evidence that leads us to believe that shots were fired," said WPS spokesperson Const. Jeffrey Norman, adding police are very familiar with the area.

"It's not uncommon due to the fact that we have responded to that address on numerous occasions."

While police remained tight-lipped about what address they frequent in the area, the Republic Nightclub sits at the corner of Bannatyne Avenue and Princess Street.

No arrests have been made and no injuries have been reported in the incident.

Italian cruise ship search continues

- 19 are listed as missing, but number could be higher
- Some passengers may be unregistered: Official

Unregistered passengers might have been aboard the stricken cruise liner that capsized off Giglio, Italy, a top rescue official said Sunday, raising the possibility that the number of missing might be higher than previously announced.

Divers, meanwhile, pulled out a woman's body from the capsized Costa Concordia on Sunday, raising to 13 the number of people dead in the Jan. 13 accident.

Earlier, Italian authorities raised the possibility that the real number of the missing was unknown because some unregistered passengers might have been aboard.

"There could have been X persons who we don't know about who were inside, who were clandestine" passengers aboard the ship, Franco Gabrielli, the national civil protection official in charge of the rescue effort, told reporters at the island where the ship, with 4,200 people aboard, rammed a reef and sliced open its hull before turning over on its side.

But one of Concordia's officers, who's recovering from a broken leg suffered during the evacuation, dismissed the allegation that such passengers were on the ship.

"Everyone is registered and photographed. Everything's electronic," the Italian news agency ANSA quoted Manrico Giampedroni as saying.

Authorities have identified eight bodies, but are still trying to identify five badly decomposed corpses. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Families informed

Relatives of missing passengers were briefed Sunday, and met with Pierluigi Foschi, the CEO of Costa Crociere, SpA, the ship's operator.

- The missing include French passengers, an elderly American couple, a Peruvian crewwoman, an Indian crewman, and an Italian father and his five-year-old daughter.

Newt Gingrich trounced Mitt Romney in South Carolina's Republican presidential primary, upending the battle to challenge President Barack Obama in November and reviving a campaign that has twice been near collapse.

Stung by the worst week in his campaign, Romney told Fox News on Sunday that he will release his tax information Tuesday, and said it was a mistake for his presidential campaign to hold off as long as it did in getting them out. He said his refusal to allow Americans to see his income and how much he paid in taxes had become a distraction in his battle for the nomination.

Gingrich said on CNN that his hardline conservative views and sharp debating skills are needed if the Republicans are to take back the White House. He dismissed Romney as a moderate whose record on health care and other issues are too close to Obama's and will not invigorate the party's base. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Navy overhauled intelligence as alleged spy lurked in midst

Former naval officer accused of leaking information to 'foreign entity' and breach of trust If proven, violations could land him a life sentence in prison

An unfolding spy drama involving a junior Canadian officer comes amid a determined effort by the Royal Canadian Navy to improve and expand its own intelligence capacity.

Over the past two years, military planners working for the head of the navy have been drawing a "road map" in order to provide decision-makers and warships at sea with better information on possible threats to domestic waters and among international shipping lanes, a series of internal documents reveal.

The strategy was widely circulated among senior echelons of the navy in 2010, according to a briefing list obtained by The Canadian Press.

It could prove to be an intelligence bonanza in the wrong hands, providing insight into how Canadians gather information.

Neither the Harper government, nor National Defence will say whether Sub-Lieut. Jeffrey Delisle had access to the strategy — or early drafts of it.

ANDREW VAUGHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Sub-Lieut. Jeffrey Delisle

Just what a potential spy might have been after and for whom has been the subject of frenzied speculation.

Officials have refused to discuss aspects of the case.

But defence and intelligence experts say the real gold for a foreign power — be it Russia or some other nation — would lay in the country's methods, code words and placement of assets. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Road map

- The proposed road map was the subject of nearly a dozen high-level briefings over the past 20 months, mostly to the former head of the navy, retired vice-admiral Dean McFadden.
- Concurrent with the development of the new strategy, the navy conducted a highly secret review of its intelligence operations and staff, the findings of which were presented in an Oct. 27, 2010, briefing.
- There was considerable internal debate about deploying naval intelligence teams and whether the service, which has struggled in recent years with staffing, could afford the manpower.
- National Defence was unable to provide comment on the road map strategy and the review when questioned on Friday.

Now that Justin Bieber tweeted to Ottawa's Hélène Campbell over the weekend, the 20-year-old is wondering what to do next with her organ-donation awareness campaign as she waits for new lungs in Toronto.

On Saturday morning, the Biebster tweeted "@alungstory i got the word....you have amazing strength. i got u. #BeAnOrganDonor" to Campbell, followed later by "help spread the word for @alungstory alungstory.ca #BeAnOrganDonor."

As of Sunday afternoon, Justin Bieber had 16.6-million Twitter followers.

"That's a pretty big deal, 16.6-million followers who are now responding," said Campbell. "It's really exciting and encouraging, not just for me but everyone who helped."

News of her campaign spread across Canada and to other parts to the world, too.

Websites in Peru and Germany reported on the Twitter love between Bieber and Campbell.

Chinese worldwide are kicking off one of year's most dumplings and fireworks for everyone Metro looks at

JORDAN POUILLE
METRO WORLD NEWS IN BEIJING

"May gold and jade come to fill your home." China is celebrating its Spring Festival on Monday. This special day marks the start of the Chinese year 4710 and eight days of feasting and wishing peace, happiness and prosperity to each other. In China, the elderly will enjoy the much-awaited annual show on state television while their married children will cook and visit friends and relatives.

The economy and industry will grind to a halt. The trains will be chaos as millions leave the factories and big cities in the south to rush home. But it's worth all the hassle: Chinese New Year is the only time migrant workers get to see their families.

The Spring Festival celebrations are all-day affairs; the louder, the better, in order to scare away evil spirits.

In Shanghai, the malls have swapped their Christmas decorations for red lanterns, dragon statues and loud traditional music. In Beijing, firecrackers are sold at every corner and lit anytime of the day. A word of caution: Two people died last year in the capital because of fireworks.

Chinese New Year is also a food festival. Prime Minister Wen Jiabao enjoys turning up at a worker's house, with a little apron, to cook dumplings in front of the cameras. Most people enjoy cheap yet healthy food, such as sweet clementines, taro cakes, braised catfish and some delicious pudding made of rice and sugar.

▶ The colour red – whether it's for street decor, envelopes filled with money for youngsters or underwear – brings good luck.

FIRST RAW CANNABIS DRUG COULD HIT SHELVES IN U.S.

A quarter-century after the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the first prescription drugs based on the main psychoactive ingredient in marijuana, additional medicines derived from or inspired by the cannabis plant itself could soon be making their way to pharmacy shelves, according to drug companies, small biotech firms and university scientists.

U.K.-based GW Pharma is in advanced trials for the first pharmaceutical developed from raw marijuana — a mouth spray it hopes to the U.S. market as a treatment for cancer pain. It hopes to see FDA approval in 2013.

Sativex contains two marijuana components — delta 9-THC and cannabidiol. It has been approved in Canada, New Zealand and eight European countries for relieving muscle spasms associated with multiple sclerosis. Currently, 16 states and the District of Columbia allow residents to use marijuana legally with doctors' recommendations. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BlackBerry maker Research in Motion's co-CEOs, Jim Balsillie and Mike Lazaridis, are stepping down.

The company says the pair who founded RIM will be replaced by Thorsten Heins, a chief operating officer who joined RIM four years ago from Siemens AG.

Balsillie and Lazaridis have headed Waterloo, Ont.-based RIM together for the past two decades.

The company took a big slide in 2011, dropping behind its peers in the lightning-paced smartphone market, suffering through the worst service outage in its history and losing tens of billions of dollars in market value.

And the PlayBook tablet, RIM's answer to the Apple iPad, failed to gain consumer support and the company was forced to give it deep discounts to help move the devices off store shelves.

Many investors held Balsillie and Lazaridis responsible for the company's problems and previously called for them to be replaced and also for the company to be sold or broken up. THE CANADIAN PRESS

ROLLING A FATTY FOR ADVENTURE

URBAN COMPASS

COLIN FAST
METRO WINNIPEG

They plan their gatherings online, using aliases like FatDallas and FatHal. And every Wednesday night, they meet at a nondescript parking lot next to the Assiniboine Forest, disguise themselves with masks and head into the woods to roll a fatty.

No, this isn't a tale of clandestine drug use. I'm talking about fat bikes, the latest winter sport craze to roll into Winnipeg.

Featuring balloon-like tires at least four inches wide, these bikes can "float" over sections of snow and ice that wouldn't be passable on a conventional bike.

"Winter cyclists rely on others for the trails they use, have faith people will help in case of emergency, take responsibility for themselves by planning and training, and ride a machine that itself is incredibly resilient."
IAN HALL, FAT BIKE RIDER

"Fat bikes are so versatile and fun to ride; in many ways they're the perfect machine for our winters," explains Ian Hall (a.k.a. Fat-Ian), who got bit with the fat bike bug two years ago. "They're becoming really popular. It's hard to go through a city park or river trail without noticing the distinct tread pattern of those tires."

While fat bikes can roll over almost anything, there's a bit of a learning curve associated with them, so Hall and other local enthusiasts established the manitobafatbike.com website to help organize regular group rides and technical practices at Assiniboine Forest.

They've also decided to push themselves even further by creating a new winter endurance race that's scheduled for Feb. 18. Called Actif Epica, the event will take competitors 130 kilometres from St. Malo to Winnipeg via the Crow Wing Trail. Related winter activities will take place at checkpoints along the way, and the finishing line will take riders right up to the snow bar at the Festival du Voyageur site in Whittier Park.

Hall says a fat bike isn't required for Actif Epica — a regular mountain bike might actually be faster over the designated route — and he suggests the race would be an appropriate challenge for anyone who has completed a marathon, a long bike tour, or similar endurance or adventure racing event.

"We're calling this a celebration of human resilience," Hall says. "Winter cyclists rely on others for the trails they use, have faith people will help in case of emergency, take responsibility for themselves by planning and training, and ride a machine that itself is incredibly resilient. Really, these connections and the resilience they create are amazing, and that's what Actif Epica is all about."

The entry deadline for Actif Epica is Feb. 13. For more information on the event, see actifepi.ca.

Maggie-mania

She was Europe's first female head of government. But that distinction didn't matter to Margaret Thatcher She was the Iron Lady, after all, a woman on a mission to revolutionize her country.

"Defeat — I do not recognize the meaning of the word!" Margaret Thatcher wasn't called the Iron Lady for nothing.

And, despite the fact that she left 10 Downing Street 21 years ago, she commands fascination and fear. In fact, the Iron Lady — with Meryl Streep as a supreme Thatcher — has inspired a new Maggie-mania.

"My mother is an ex-hippie who starts crying when one mentions Thatcher, but many people in my generation feel a strong admiration for Thatcher," says Max Wind-Cowie, 26, a public opinion researcher at Demos, a London think tank. "People don't always agree with her policies, but at least you knew what she stood for. With today's politicians you can't really tell what they believe in."

To be sure, the Iron Lady knew what she believed in: individual liberty, free enterprise and anti-Communism.

"Even though there aren't many real Thatcherites, people who subscribe to Thatcher's ideology, left, many people look back at her with nostalgia", notes Richard Vinen, Professor of Modern European History at King's College, London, and author of Thatcher's Britain.

"Especially now, with the EU in crisis, people remember her for her opposition to the EU."

Indeed, today's Britain seems much closer to Thatcher's beliefs than the Britain she ruled. Last year 54 per cent of Britons thought social benefits (to low-income households) were too high, compared to 35 per cent in 1983. "Sympathy for people at the bottom of the heap has evaporated," notes Wind-Cowie.

Thatcher's actions

1. Kept Britain out of the single European currency.
2. Marginalized Britain's powerful trade unions. The move caused high unemployment, and anger, in Britain's North.
3. Privatized gas, electricity, telephony, British Airways and British Rail.
4. Cut welfare benefits.
5. Stood up to the Soviet Union, supported by Ronald Reagan.
6. Won the Falklands War against Argentina.

A day in the life of Maggie

The champion of individual responsibility can't remember anything, let alone take care of herself.

Margaret Thatcher suffers from dementia. "Though there's currently a lot of research into its causes, dementia is still an illness without a cure," explains Dr. Claudia Cooper, Lecturer in old-age psychiatry at University College, London.

"Patients often get lost or forget to eat, and they can also get depression or physical health problems."

The Iron Lady, ruler of the box office

A political movie, how dull. But Meryl Streep as Maggie Thatcher is a completely different matter.

During its first weekend in British cinemas, The Iron Lady captured the top box office spot, taking over $5 million .

This figure is nearly three times the box office achieved by The Queen when it opened in 2006.

Twentieth Century Fox, the film's distributor, reported that The Iron Lady even did well in Britain's North, where Thatcher remains disliked, even loathed. Meryl Streep won a Golden Globe for the role.

The Project Runway All Stars prove reality TV isn't always about being horrible to your fellow contestants But the claws may still come out this season Designers have only six hours to complete their next challenge

▶ Some of the Project Runway All Stars: Mondo Guerra, left, Kenley Collins, Michael Costello, Kara Janx, and Austin Scarlett were all smiles Thursday in New York City.

Aside from occasional dust-ups at the Neiman Marcus accessory wall, Project Runway is one reality show that isn't known for its backbiting.

At a New York screening of the spin-off Project Runway All Stars contestants — including the dashing Austin Scarlett in beads and a bow tie — broke from the usual red carpet decorum to greet each other with squeals and hugs.

"I keep in touch with a lot of them," said Kara Janx. "I've formed some really solid relationships."

So how do these "all stars" — favourite designers from the first eight seasons of Project Runway who are competing once again in a new series of fashion challenges — make it work the second time around?

"You need to admire your fellow designers and get inspired by each other," said Kenley Collins, wearing her trademark red lipstick. "Make your life a little easier and just get along!"

"She's such a diva," joked Michael Costello, cutting in to throw an arm around Collins.

Meanwhile, Janx cited "mutual respect, mutual understanding" as the key.

"I don't feel like you have to step on toes to get ahead," she said. "You're just so curious to see what other designers will bring to the table."

It's not just contestants who noticed the camaraderie on set.

"Fashion is a community," said designer Isaac Mizrahi, one of the show's judges. But that all might change in an upcoming episode, when the designers are given only six hours to complete a challenge.

Executive producer Rob Bagshaw says those kinds of tasks were created to pit contestants "against the challenge instead of each other."

We'll see if the needles come out.

What's up with Heidi and Seal?

Speaking of Project Runway, shocking news broke over the weekend that host Heidi Klum is planning to file for divorce from husband Seal, per TMZ. But now gossips and "sources" the world over are backtracking.

"Nothing is finalized or for sure," a friend of the two told Us Weekly. "Seal flew back from the U.K. yesterday and he and Heidi are in the house together now."

According to some reports, Klum is fed up with Seal's partying lifestyle.

"When they had their holiday in Ibiza in the summer last year, Seal hit it hard, was out at clubs and with his friends a lot and Heidi was left with their kids trying to enjoy herself," a source told The Mirror.

This is so sad; they always seemed like they were one celebrity couple who would make it. Hopefully Seal will man up and realize that Klum is a much better option than the bottle.

If not, there is truly no hope for any Hollywood marriage.

Zac Efron and Taylor Swift shared a flirty dinner in L.A. recently, prompting speculation that the two young stars are dating, according Hollyscoop.

Sources say the pair arrived at Italian restaurant Pace together in Efron's Audio and "were deep in conversation and very giggly."

But folks from both Efron and Swift's camps say it was totally platonic. They were in L.A. doing press stuff together, and after they were done, they decided to grab dinner," a source close to Swift says. "Taylor thinks Zac's cute ... [but] they are on totally different wavelengths." METRO

Heather's no stranger to rehab

Prior to her hospitalization for a potential overdose on alcohol and prescription pills, Heather Locklear had reportedly been in rehab, though her family tried to keep it a secret, sources tell Us Weekly.

"Heather has been out of control for many years," a source says.

"Her drinking has caused her to fall out of many friendships."

And her recent split from fiancé Jack Wagner reportedly sent her off the deep end.

"She doesn't get out of bed most days," the source explains.

"Jack kept her on the straight and narrow, but he couldn't keep Heather sober."

Unfortunately, though Locklear did seek treatment after the split, she "didn't take it seriously," the source says.

Florida scientists have discovered that starting around six months, babies begin shifting from the intent eye gaze of early infancy to studying mouths when people talk.

"The baby, in order to imitate you, has to figure out how to shape their lips to make that particular sound they're hearing," explains developmental psychologist David Lewkowicz of Florida Atlantic University, who led the study.

Kids says the darndest things

▶The proud parents of the f-bomb dropping toddler.

On a recent episode of Modern Family, a toddler uses a bad word Our mommyish.com writer wonders, do you watch what curse words you say around your kids?

On last week's Modern Family, toddler Lily dropped an F-bomb, to the utter horror of her parents.

The character is two-and-a-half-years old. The episode's title? Little Bo Bleep. This was the first time a scripted family TV show has had a child utter the profanity that rhymes with puck. (Don't worry, it wasn't audible to the viewer.)

As the owner of a horrible potty mouth, I could not relate to this more.

The fact is, actually, that I have dropped my cussing dramatically since the birth of my first child. And yet … it was just a couple of years ago that my parents were watching my children when my then two-and-a-half-year old said "s—."

The worst thing? She used it correctly. Like, she broke something and dropped the S-bomb. My mother is a public school teacher who has literally never cussed. My dad is a pastor. When my mom politely told me the news, I just immediately responded by apologizing. There was no use pretending that she had picked it up from anyone but me. Everyone knows I have problems cussing.

Still, it was an important moment that led to further efforts to stop my sailor-level vocabulary. But apparently, it's not enough.

During last week's football game, I think I lost years off my life as I cheered. Every time something bad happened, I modified cuss words. Or, well, I cussed in foreign languages. My husband told me to watch it around the kids. I hate it when he's right.

Another friend told me about how her kids were playing with friends in the neighborhood while parents sat outside and chatted. The kids were on bikes and one kid cut another kid off at the end of the cul-de-sac. "Get out of the way, A—hole" one little boy exclaimed, not even particularly upset. The father of that child, blushing, told the boy to watch his language and then said something about how he'd have to talk to him later. But everyone laughed nervously because they knew the kid had picked it up from his parents.

And this is the shame of the child's potty mouth. It's almost always a reflection of our lack of control as parents, our inability to speak kindly to our neighbors and fellow citizens or, worse, the members of our own family.

We like to pretend, particularly among our peers, that we're great examples to our kids. When our children reveal that we're not, it's embarrassing. But it's also chastening and a great reminder of why children are such a blessing. They frequently help us become better people.

MOLLIE HEMINGWAY, MOMMYISH.COM

No Cussing Club

Even before the episode aired last week, an anti-profanity crusader asked ABC to pull the episode. McKay Hatch, 18, founded the No Cussing Club in 2007. He asked his club's members, whom he said number 35,000 in the U.S. and about three dozen other countries, to complain to ABC.

Protestors' take
"Our main goal is to stop this from happening," said Hatch. "If we don't, at least ABC knows that people all over the world don't want to have a two-year-old saying the 'F-bomb' on TV. We hope they know better."

The network's take
"We thought it was a very natural story, since as parents, we've all been through this. We are not a sexually charged show. It has a very warm tone so people accept it more. I'm sure we'll have some detractors," said Steven Levitan, creator and executive producer of the sitcom with Christopher Lloyd.

For a dragon-sized appetite

Start Chinese New Year off right Try Chinese long beans for a long life

MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ This recipe makes eight servings.

Eating long beans to symbolize a long life is a hallmark of Chinese New Year.

These beans often go by other names, including asparagus beans, yard-long beans and snake beans.

Since this new year is the year of the dragon, more specifically the water dragon, serve this longevity dish with the dragon of the sea — lobster. If lobster isn't available, shrimp is another good choice.

Preparation:

1 In wok over medium-high, heat vegetable oil. Add peppercorns, five-spice powder and garlic. Heat, stirring constantly, for 30 seconds.

2 Add beans and toss to coat. Add water, oyster sauce, and soy sauce and cover. Allow beans to steam for 5 mins., or until just tender. Add sesame oil, Sriracha, lobster meat and sesame seeds. Toss and cook until heated. Serve.

Ingredients:

- 15 ml (1 tbsp) vegetable oil
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) Sichuan peppercorns, crushed
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) Chinese five-spice powder
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 750 grams (1 1/2 pounds) Chinese long beans
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) water
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) oyster sauce
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) soy sauce
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) toasted sesame oil
- Splash of Sriracha sauce
- 210 grams (7 ounces) cooked lobster meat, chopped
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) toasted sesame seeds

Are reusable coffee filters made with metallic mesh more eco-friendly than recycled paper filters? Joel of Ottawa

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

Yes. Allow the second R of the three Rs to prevail: Reuse!

Reusable filters are even better than paper products made from 100 hundred per cent post-consumer waste (PCW) and processed chlorine-free (PCF), especially if the metal filter is recyclable. It takes effort — energy, resources, etc. — to make all paper products. Many filters on the market are also chlorine-bleached. Chlorine is toxic to produce and poisonous to fish.

If you do use good recycled paper filters, you can compost the grounds and the filter. Coffee grounds are excellent for the garden because they contain nitrogen. Sure it's snowy in most cities across Canada now, so mix the grounds into your indoor plant pots. Come spring, you can sprinkle the grounds around outdoor plants to create a slug and snail barrier (grounds are abrasive and acidic) or mix them right into the soil to release nutrients.

ISTOCK PHOTOS

But hold the bus. What kind of coffee are you brewing?

Coffee is the second-most-traded commodity in the world, after oil. And millions of acres of land have been cleared worldwide to grow coffee, effectively evicting all the forest inhabitants, including migrant boreal songbirds. Most coffee is produced as a monoculture crop, in direct sunlight. These plantations also require chemical fertilizers and pesticides.

Make the switch to coffee that has been triple certified: organic, fair trade, and shade grown; this will ensure that it is also bird-friendly.

Bird-friendly plantations not only protect some of the last remaining refuge areas for hundreds of species of birds, they also allow farmers to grow other crops as a hedge against weather hardships, pests and diseases.

Coffee plants grown under the rainforest canopy use organic leaf litter as fertilizer. Insects are controlled by natural predators such as bats and birds.

On top of that, the coffee farmer won't have to bathe in toxic pesticides to get you a morning caffeine pick-me-up.

If you ever find youself in Times Square in New York City, look up at all the bright, flashing billboards.

Jeff Klause says he was only 11 years old when he designed the technology that IBM would use to control blinking lights such as these iconic ones.

The award-winning youth went on to become an entrepreneur, manufacturing bunk beds, marketing products at trade shows then moving on to website design and computers.

CEO of Rainy Day Internet, Jeff Klause

Now 36 years old, the CEO of Rainy Day Internet in Manitoba uses a hands-on approach that often finds him up a signal tower wearing his hard hat and working alongside his employees.

"I see the future and the potential in things and I surround myself with good people," he says.

"It always takes longer to achieve certain goals. Accept the reality in each situation and adjust your goals."

Klause is a man of technology and vision but most importantly he has the passion and drive to see his ideas through to the end.

"I'm always thinking about the bigger picture. But I also climb towers because people don't work for me, they work with me."

"I see the future and the potential in things and I surround myself with good people."

▶ Ravens kicker Billy Cundiff misses a 32-yard field goal in the closing seconds against the Patriots on Sunday.

Close call for Patriots

Tom Brady got all the help he needed to get the New England Patriots into the Super Bowl.

Thank you, Billy Cundiff.

The Baltimore Ravens kicker shanked a 32-yard field goal with 11 seconds left and the Patriots escaped with a 23-20 victory in the AFC championship game on Sunday.

Usually, vintage Brady doesn't need much assistance in championship settings, but the Patriots' much-maligned defence came through, and Brady's one-yard touchdown dive with 11:29 left proved to be the winning points.

PATRIOTS	RAVENS

"Well, I sucked pretty bad today, but our defence saved us," Brady said after throwing for 239 yards, with two interceptions and, for the first time in 36 games, no TD passes. "I'm going to try to go out and do a better job in a couple of weeks, but I'm proud of this team, my teammates."

Brady waited out the final tense minutes on the sideline, and then celebrated with the rest of his team when Cundiff's attempt went wide left. The Ravens looked on in horror.

Next up as the Patriots (15-3) chase their fourth Super Bowl trophy in Brady's and coach Bill Belichick's tenure in New England is a Super Bowl rematch against the New York Giants on Feb. 5. The Giants beat the San Francisco 49ers 20-17 in overtime on Sunday.

In their last trip to the big game, the Patriots had an 18-0 record when they were stunned by the Giants four years ago. They won the NFL championship for the 2001, 2003 and 2004 seasons. This time, they head to the Super Bowl with a 10-game winning streak.

"We're going to try to go out and kick some butt in a couple of weeks," said Brady, whose fifth trip to the Super Bowl will equal John Elway's achievement with Denver.

Manning leads Giants to NFC title

Eli Manning is headed to another Super Bowl with a shot to show the world he belongs in the same breath as Tom Brady.

Manning directed one short, final drive and Lawrence Tynes kicked a game-winning 31-yard field goal in sudden-death overtime, sending the New York Giants to the Super Bowl with a 20-17 victory over the San Francisco 49ers in the NFC championship game Sunday night.

In another tight one in this decades-old post-season rivalry, both defences made key stops before New York capitalized on another costly mistake by San Francisco.

GIANTS	49ERS
20	17

Manning and the Giants (12-7) will face the New England Patriots in the Super Bowl on Feb. 5 in Indianapolis. The last time the teams met for the NFL title, 2008, the Giants ended the Patriots' bid for a perfect season.

Tynes got the Giants there for a second time. He kicked the game-winning field goal in overtime at Green Bay in the 2008 NFC title game that put New York in the Super Bowl on the way to the franchise's third title.

Devin Thomas put the Giants in position. He recovered his second fumble of the game after Jacquian Williams stripped the ball from fill-in return man Kyle Williams, who also fumbled earlier to set up a New York touchdown.

"It's my second NFC championship game, my second game-winner," Tynes said. "It's amazing. I had dreams about this last night. It was from 42, not 31, but I was so nervous today before the game just anticipating this kind of game. I'm usually pretty cool, but there was something about tonight where I knew I was going to have to make a kick. Hats off to Eli, offence, defence. Great win."

Manning went 32 of 58 for 316 yards and two touchdowns in his record fifth road playoff win, New York's fifth in a row overall and fifth out of six.

Another sad day in Happy Valley

Ex-Penn State coach Paterno dies of cancer at 85, months after his legend was shattered in sex-abuse scandal

Happy Valley was perfect for Joe Paterno, a place where he not only won more football games than any other major U.S. college coach, but won them the right way: With integrity and sportsmanship. A place where character came first, championships second.

Behind it all, however, was an ugly secret that ran counter to everything the coach stood for.

Paterno, a sainted figure at Penn State, but scarred forever by the child sex-abuse scandal that led to his stunning dismissal, died in State College, Pa., Sunday at age 85.

His death came 65 days after his son Scott said his father had been diagnosed with a treatable form of lung cancer. The cancer was found during a follow-up visit for a bronchial illness.

Mount Nittany Medical Center said in a statement that Paterno died at 9:25 a.m. of "metastatic small cell carcinoma of the lung." Metastatic indicates an illness that has spread from one part of the body to an unrelated area.

The hospital says Paterno was surrounded by family members.

Paterno had been in the hospital since Jan. 13 for observation after what his family called minor complications from his cancer treatments. Not long before that, he conducted his only interview since losing his job, with The Washington Post. Paterno was described as frail, speaking mostly in a whisper. The second half of the two-day interview was conducted bedside.

His family released a statement Sunday morning to announce his death: "His loss leaves a void in our lives that will never be filled.

"He fought hard until the end, stayed positive, thought only of others and constantly reminded everyone of how blessed his life had been," the statement said. "His ambitions were far reaching, but he never believed he had to leave this Happy Valley to achieve them. He was a man devoted to his family, his university, his players and his community."

Paterno's death came just under three months following his last victory.

Two police officers were stationed to block traffic on the street where Paterno's home stands. The officers said the family had asked there be no gathering so Paterno's relatives could grieve privately.

Paterno's sons, Scott and Jay, arrived at the house late Sunday morning. Jay Paterno, who served as his father's quarterbacks coach, was crying.

Paterno built a program based on the credo of "Success with Honor." The man won 409 games and took the Nittany Lions to 37 bowl games and two national championships. More than 250 of his players went on to the NFL.

Paterno roamed the sidelines for 46 seasons and insisted that on-field success not come at the expense of high graduation rates.

But in the middle of his 46th season, the legend was shattered. Paterno was engulfed in a child sex-abuse scandal when a former trusted assistant, Jerry Sandusky, was accused of molesting 10 boys over a 15-year span.

Outrage built quickly when the state's top cop said the coach hadn't fulfilled a moral obligation to go to the authorities when a graduate assistant, Mike McQueary, told Paterno he saw Sandusky with a young boy in the showers of the football complex in 2002.

At a preliminary hearing for school officials, McQueary testified that he had seen Sandusky attacking the child with his hands around the boy's waist but said he wasn't 100 per cent sure it was intercourse. McQueary described Paterno as shocked and saddened and said the coach told him he had "done the right thing" by reporting the encounter.

Paterno waited a day before alerting school officials and never went to police.

"You know, (McQueary) didn't want to get specific," Paterno said in the Post interview. "And to be frank with you I don't know that it would have done any good, because I never heard of, of, rape and a man. So I just did what I thought was best."

Paterno said he would retire following the 2011 season, calling it "one of the great sorrows of my life."

But university trustees fired Paterno immediately. Graham Spanier, one of the longest-serving university presidents in the nation, also was fired.

Paterno and his wife, Sue, raised five children in State College.

He walked to home games and was greeted and wished good luck by fans on the street.

He also could be abrasive and stubborn, and he had his share of run-ins with his bosses or administrators.

Calls for his retirement reached a crescendo in 2004. The next year, Penn State went 11-1 and won the Big Ten. In the Orange Bowl, PSU beat Florida State, whose coach, Bobby Bowden, was eased out after the 2009 season after 34 years and 389 wins.

Like many others, he was outlasted by Paterno.

♈ Aries March 21-April 20
The more you focus on a problem the more of a problem it will become, so pull your mind away from it and concentrate on something positive.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21
You should be aiming in some way to improve yourself today.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21
Try taking a more laid-back approach to your problems. Try looking at the bright side instead of the dark.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22
Someone with whom you have dealings of a business nature may try to cheat you today.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23
You might as well give up trying to have your way and let partners and colleagues call the shots.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22
If others don't approve of your methods that's too bad: more than likely it will encourage you to use them even more (you can be perverse like that at times).

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
This is potentially one of the best days (and weeks) of the year for you.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22
You may have to force yourself to be positive about what you are expected to do today.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Go out into the world and have as much fun as possible.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Family problems and money issues may be getting you down but the planets suggest there are better days ahead and it won't be long before they arrive.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18
You are in the right place and the right frame of mind to make a new beginning of some sort.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
You may have your doubts about a joint project of some kind but don't let them show. SALLY BROMPTON
